- What was your overall impression of the cancer plan?
  - Craig D.: Overall cancer plan is very comprehensive; likes that it calls out disparities and talks about the lack of data representation; this is vital to the steps that we take to address them at institutions.
    - Question: what is the purpose of focusing on urban Indian programs?
  - Josh H.: appreciates how it is thoughtfully laid out, appreciates the ways and abilities to capture culture as objectives
  - Craig D.: great job at all the work
  - Jessica D.: I really like how it is pulled together in a way that almost provides step by step guidance on how to offer the best cancer care for our patients. I think it is comprehensive but very straight forward.
- What do you like best about the cancer plan?
- What stood out to you that is new or surprised you?
  - Craig D.: relationship between cancer centers and AICAF
  - Sheana D.: what does it look like for the patient (clinical linkages)?
    - AICAF: conversation to come
  - Josh H.: nothing surprising
- What section or objective are you most interested in?

- Jessica D.: survivorship and palliative care options, because IHS doesn't cover hospice; how do other facilities approach that option to care?
- Craig D.: increasing education materials; objectives on clinical trials, at Fred Hutch they are trying to increase resources on clinical trials
- Josh H.: tobacco policy work

1:50      Next Steps (5 min) (Speaker: Melissa)
